THE REPUBLICAN WAY.

It would be a serious mistake in deed for any Republican official to assume that he has nothing to fear from the State Inspector and Examiner. For any infracton of the law, a Republican should be beaten with many stripes, whereas for the ense, a Democrat might justly be allowed to go free, upon the ground of ignorance. According to the light we have, so should e live, and consistently thereherefore it is written, "Him doeth it not, to him it is sin. Republicans, take warning! Unless special spreentulous are taken the fowls are continually dring from one cause or another, and the profits shrink correspondingly. Most of these troubles are easily preventable if a little care is taken. One of the most important considerations is standard to the most important considerations is standard on the parasite of the most important considerations is standard out frequently and sprintly with quicklime or some disinfertantiame scattered about the parasis also helps. The coops and smaller buildings should be moved from place to place frequently. Whitewash should be used liberally everywhere. One of the best kinds of whitewash is made according to what is, known as the greenment formula, as follows:

Slack half a bushed of lime in boiling water. Strain and add a peck of salt that has been dissolved in warm water, three pounds of ground rice boiled to a thin paste, one-half pound powdered Spanish whiting, one pound of glue dissolved in warm water. Mix these well and then let the mixture stand for several days. Heat before using and apply hot.

these well and then let the initiation stand for several days. Heat before using and apply hot.

Importance of Pure Water.
One important means of keeping fowls healthy and one that is often neglected is giving them a constant supply of pure water. Because fowls do not require water in as large quantities as other animals it is often thought that they can get along without any except what they get in puddles in the barnyard. They will drink such water if they can get no other. but It is just as bad for their health set the would be for yours. This is a is it would be for yours. This is a and poultry raising for profit becomes impossible on that account. Water put out in open troughs soon becomes warm and dirty, and if there

Water put out in open troughs soon becomes warm and dirty, and if there should happen to be a contagious discusse in the flock it will be rapidly spread through the water. A common hog waterer attached to a barrelow the shady side of the poultry house is one of the best ways of supplying water. If filled once a week or so no further attention is needed. A jug or large bottle of water inverted over a whellow pan in such a manner that the opening is just covered by the water in the pan makes a good drinking founts in. The water will rundown into the pan as fast as it is used. There are several types of metal fountains on the market which work on this same principle. Most of them are cheen and satisfactory.

A considerable factor in causing disease among fowis is improper feeding. Overfeeding and feeding too much soft food are the causes of a large percentage of the deaths among young chicks.

of the deaths among young chicks. In older fowls the corn ration that is so often the sole food is frequently the cause of digestive and other troufed will do much to keep the fowls

Another cause of disease in unhealthy Another cause of disease in unhealthy surroundings. Low, damp poultry yards, where the water stands in puddies for days after each rain, are prolifes sources of poultry troubles. Have the poultry house high end dry. If a dry yard cannot be obtained in any other way grade it up a little end cover if with gravel.

Strong Vitality Necessary.

Many of the diseases to which poultry is subject are due to inherited weakness. Experiments have praced that vitality and rigor are readily.

that vitality and vigor are readily transmitted from parent to offspring. In an experiment at the Cornell station two pens of fowls were selected. One had especially strong vitality, and the other was only medium in this respect. The progrey of each of thesa pens was given the same kind of thesa pens was given the same kind of feed and care, and in the fall the results were tabulated. It was found that the chickens from the strong tiality pens matured from three to four weeks cariler and were worth 20 cents appeles more at maturity. It is this lask of selection for vitality that causes so many of the fancy varieties to run out. Vitality is the most impartant single point to be looked to poultry raising, especially in selectpartant single point to be looked to in poultry raising, especially in select-ing dowls for the breeding pen. If such selection is made, the health and rigor of the flock will be greatly im-proved and the losses correspondingly decreased.

Contagious Diseases. Poultry is subject to a few con-repair tagious diseases, which aften wipe out flock.

affinest the entire flock. These dis-cases, like contagions diseases of man, are caused by blicteria or germs. These are tiny cells which gain en-trance to the body and grow there. Death is not caused by the germs themselves, but by certain postons which they give off. After germs gain entrance to the body they are difficult to combat, since anything that will kill the germ will manulty kill the fowl also. Germs cannot gain a foothold in a perfectly healthy bird; hence one of the best means of combatting con-tagions, diseases R. by keeping the

2,000 paris of water. There is no way to cirre the fowls after they once get the disease. All that can be hoped for is to save the well ones.

4. Probably the most common poultry disease is roup. This is really a germ disease, but the germs cannot well get a foothold except under special conditions. These are found when the bird catches cold. The germs work mostly in the nesal passages, causing a cheesy secretion that has a very dis-rgreeable odor. The head swells, the eyes often being swollen entirely shut. An affected bird may live for a long time and sometimes even get well, but treatment consists in killing the affected birds and removing the cause. Exposure to cold and dampness is among the chief causes. A dry, warm house, especially ohe with a current front to provide for pienty of ventilation without drafts, is one of the best preventive measures. The currained reosting apartment also helps to keep the fowls from catching gold in severe weather.

Lice and Mites.

The most troublesome parasites of pontiry are lice and inites. These pests are very different in their habits. The lice remain on the bird all the time enting the feathers and the little they are not usually present in large They are not usually present in large enough numbers to do any considerable damage, except to sitting bens and small chicks. One of the most, effective means of combating like is the dust bath. This is simply a convenient sized bor filled with fine dust to which the heurs can roll. Lice and other insects breaths through this boles along the sides of their bodies. The dust fills these holes, and they die of suffocation. A little turpentine added to the dust bath makes it more effective.

The dust treatment is usually all that is required to keep the lice in sheeks where they get unusually bad pyrethrum or tobacco dust blown in among the feathers is effective. This plan lakes too joug to be used arthristickly.

thrum or toinece dust blown in among the feathers is effective. This plan takes too long to be used extensively, however. Lice frequently make their way from the hen to the cheks at hatching time and often cause the death of many of them. The best way to prevent this, of course, is to see that the bens are free from lice between the course of the cou hardly be seen with the naked eye, but the damage they do is not measured by their size. Haif the so called dis-eases to which poultry are subject are caused by mites. When fowls sicken and die without any apparent cause it is time to look for mites. Plaining the rootst-rapd adjacent walls thoroughly with crude petroleum or keros ne wildestroy many of them. The same with crude petroleum or keros as willdestroy many of them. The same treatment should also be applied to coops and nest boxes. The litter under the roots is often-a-breeding place for mites. It should be cleaned out frequently and hauled away. After cleaning out, the floor-should be thore oughly soaked with a strong solution of some coal ard dipp. If the positry house is fairly tight burning sulphur in it will effectively destroy all mites termin and disease in check requires considerable work and constant tighlance, but it is work that will be well lance, but it is work that will be
